Poland has a well-developed competition law regime that is based on the European Union's competition rules. The Polish Competition Authority (UOKiK) is responsible for enforcing the competition laws in Poland.

This guide provides a comprehensive overview of the competition laws in Poland. It covers the following topics:

* The Polish Competition Authority (UOKiK) * The Polish Competition Act * Anti-competitive agreements * Merger control * Abuse of dominance

This guide is an essential resource for businesses operating in Poland. It provides a clear and concise explanation of the competition laws and their implications for businesses.

The Polish Competition Authority (UOKiK)

The Polish Competition Authority (UOKiK) is an independent body that is responsible for enforcing the competition laws in Poland. The UOKiK has a wide range of powers to investigate anti-competitive practices and impose penalties on businesses that violate the competition laws.

The UOKiK is headed by a president who is appointed by the Prime Minister of Poland. The president of the UOKiK is responsible for setting the UOKiK's priorities and overseeing its operations.

The UOKiK has a staff of approximately 200 employees. The staff is divided into several departments, each of which is responsible for a specific area of competition law.

The UOKiK has offices in Warsaw, Krakow, and Poznan.

The Polish Competition Act

The Polish Competition Act is the primary piece of legislation that governs competition law in Poland. The Competition Act prohibits anti-competitive agreements, merger control, and abuse of dominance.

The Competition Act was enacted in 2004 and has been amended several times since then. The most recent amendment to the Competition Act was made in 2015.

The Competition Act is based on the European Union's competition rules. However, the Competition Act also contains some provisions that are unique to Poland.

Anti-competitive agreements

Anti-competitive agreements are agreements between businesses that restrict competition. Anti-competitive agreements can take many forms, including:

* Agreements to fix prices * Agreements to divide markets * Agreements to restrict output

Anti-competitive agreements are illegal in Poland. The UOKiK can impose penalties on businesses that enter into anti-competitive agreements.

Merger control

Merger control is a regulatory process that reviews mergers and acquisitions to ensure that they do not harm competition. In Poland, mergers and acquisitions that meet certain thresholds are subject to review by the UOKiK.

The UOKiK can prohibit mergers and acquisitions that it determines are likely to harm competition. The UOKiK can also impose conditions on mergers and acquisitions in Free Download to mitigate their anti-competitive effects.

Abuse of dominance

Abuse of dominance occurs when a business has a dominant position in a market and uses that position to harm competition. Abuse of dominance can take many forms, including:

* Predatory pricing * Exclusive dealing * Tying

Abuse of dominance is illegal in Poland. The UOKiK can impose penalties on businesses that abuse their dominant position.

This guide provides a comprehensive overview of the competition laws in Poland. It covers the Polish Competition Authority (UOKiK), the Polish Competition Act, anti-competitive agreements, merger control, and abuse of dominance.

This guide is an essential resource for businesses operating in Poland. It provides a clear and concise explanation of the competition laws and their implications for businesses.
