Here is an excerpt from the book:

“Emily stood on the edge of the charred forest, looking out at the devastation. All around her, the trees were blackened and leafless, and the ground was covered in ash. The air was thick with smoke, and the smell of burnt wood hung heavy in the air.

Emily took a deep breath and stepped into the forest. She walked slowly, carefully avoiding the fallen trees and debris.

As she walked, she thought about all that she had lost. Her home, her family, her friends—everything was gone.

But even in the midst of her grief, Emily felt a flicker of hope. She knew that she had to keep going. She had to survive. For herself, and for the memory of her loved ones.”
