The marketplace of revolution is a system of exchange that is based on the principles of solidarity, mutual aid, and cooperation. It is a system in which people come together to meet their needs and desires without the need for money or profit. Instead of competing with each other for resources, people in the marketplace of revolution work together to create a society in which everyone has what they need to live a good life.

Gelderloos argues that the marketplace of revolution is not only a more just and equitable economic system than capitalism, but it is also a more sustainable and resilient system. He points to the fact that capitalism is based on the endless pursuit of growth, which is ultimately unsustainable. The marketplace of revolution, on the other hand, is based on the principles of sustainability and resilience. It is a system that is designed to meet the needs of people and the planet, not the needs of profit.

The marketplace of revolution is a radical alternative to capitalism, but it is also a realistic alternative. Gelderloos provides a detailed plan for how to create a marketplace of revolution in our own communities. He shows how we can use existing resources and institutions to build a new economic system that is based on solidarity, mutual aid, and cooperation.

The Marketplace of Revolution is a must-read for anyone who is interested in creating a more just, equitable, and sustainable world. It is a book that will inspire you to think differently about economics and to imagine a world beyond capitalism.
