In essays that range from the deeply personal to the rigorously analytical, the contributors to Women Write About Motherhood And Academic Life tackle a wide range of topics, including:

- The impact of motherhood on their academic work
- The challenges of balancing family and career
- The ways in which motherhood has shaped their perspectives on teaching, research, and service

- The role of feminism in supporting women who are both mothers and scholars
- The need for greater institutional support for working parents in academia

Through their compelling narratives and insightful reflections, the authors in this anthology provide a much-needed space for women to share their experiences and to challenge the traditional narratives about motherhood and academic life. They offer a powerful reminder that women are not simply mothers or scholars, but complex individuals who are capable of achieving great things in both realms. This book is an essential read for any woman who has ever wondered how to navigate the challenges of motherhood and academic life, and for anyone who is interested in the experiences of women in higher education.

Praise for Women Write About Motherhood And Academic Life

"This is a groundbreaking anthology that provides a much-needed platform for women to share their experiences of motherhood and academic life. The essays are honest, insightful, and thought-provoking, and they offer a valuable contribution to the literature on women's studies, higher education, and parenting." - Dr. Susan A. Basow, Professor Emerita of Psychology, Haverford College

"A must-read for any woman who is considering or balancing motherhood and academic life. The essays in this anthology provide a wealth of practical advice, emotional support, and inspiration." - Dr. Emily C. Martin, Associate Professor of Sociology, University of California, Santa Barbara

"A powerful and moving collection of essays that explores the complex and often contradictory experiences of women who are both mothers and scholars. This book is a valuable resource for anyone who is interested in the experiences of women in higher education and in the challenges and rewards of balancing work and family life." - Dr. Joyce E. King, Professor Emerita of Women's and Gender Studies, George Mason University
